3.2.3. 3D Laser Scanner

Product description:

This high-precision, non-contact 3D scanning device uses laser technology to capture the detailed spatial geometry of objects or environments. By projecting laser beams and recording the reflected data, it generates a dense "point cloud" that accurately represents real-world conditions.

The captured data can be used to create precise 2D and 3D digital models (compatible with CAD, Revit, BIM, etc.) of existing structures or components. This enables essential workflows such as producing "as-built" drawings, minimising the need for on-site visits and performing clash detection, making it ideal for applications in engineering, architecture, construction, and facility management.
